

Tips for Protecting Your Car from the Coastal Elements

Learn more at: PensacolaLawyer.com

If you have access to a garage, use it. Keeping your car covered on all sides will help to prevent damage caused by the open air.

As your paint slowly begins to wear, so does the body of your vehicle. Check for paint corrosion.

Your vehicle should be washed at least once a week to remove salt and pollutants from its finish.

Don't drive your vehicle through the sand, and avoid taking it into ocean water. If you do either of these things, take the time to put a hose to its underside to rinse off the salt and sand you've picked up.

If you notice little spots of rust on bolts and other fasteners, have them replaced before corrosion has a chance to set in.

